

The consulting firm will be paid about $200,000 for the project. There is no official timetable, said Metro Finance Director Rich Riebeling. "It's not just a financial lion in debt in 2008. The mayor's proposed budget for fiscal year 2010 includes forgiving an additional $32 million.

— KATE HOWARD
kahoward@tennessean.com

WILLIAMSON COUNTY

Newcomer wins Brentwood election

Rhea Little will begin her first term on the Brentwood City Commission after garnering the most votes in Tuesday's election.

When ballots were counted at the Brentwood Library, newcomer Little had 2,700 votes. Four seats on the commission were up for grabs.

Incumbents Regina

Smithson, Paul Webb and Joe Reagan won the remaining seats. Webb and Smithson tied with 1,979 votes. Reagan finished in fourth place with 1,929 votes.

More details about the race and the winners will be in Thursday's edition of Williamson AM.

— HARRIET VAUGHAN
hvaughan@tennessean.com

RUTHERFORD COUNTY

Teacher quits over testing 'mistake'

A Rutherford County teacher has resigned after she made what she called an "honest mistake" during state testing.

Sherry Culbertson had taught at Central Middle School since August 2008 but was suspended without pay on Feb. 2.

The eighth-grade spe-

after it was distributed.

She gave the students extra time to take the test, said James Evans, county schools spokesman.

Evans said the students' tests were disqualified. State rules bar students from taking the test twice. "It doesn't affect them academically," he added.

East Nashville, says she has concerns about the park's design even before it opened in 2006. She said then that small dogs need a separate fenced area, such as at Centennial Park's dog area.

She also says dog owners need to take responsibility but that most owners are blind to socialization skills and the "packing order" in the dog world.

"It is a shame as some owners will bring their beloved 4-legged friend and keep them on leash due to the recent fights and fatalities," Brewer said.

ACTION: Metro's parks department enlisted some of its dog management team to listen to concerns about the Shelby Park dog area and talk about the city's dog parks, past and future. There are three: at Shelby Park, Centennial Park and Edwin Warner Park.

First, if folks want to discuss the Shelby Park area, they are urged to set up a meeting with the dog management team.

The team includes parks representatives, including its police force, and representatives of Metro's Animal Control Department, the Nashville Humane Association, the state veterinary association and

The consulting firm will be paid about $200,000 for the project. There is no official timetable, said Metro Finance Director Rich Riebeling. "It's not just a financial lion in debt in 2008. The mayor's proposed budget for fiscal year 2010 includes forgiving an additional $32 million.

— KATE HOWARD
kahoward@tennessean.com

WILLIAMSON COUNTY

Newcomer wins Brentwood election

Rhea Little will begin her first term on the Brentwood City Commission after garnering the most votes in Tuesday's election.

When ballots were counted at the Brentwood Library, newcomer Little had 2,700 votes. Four seats on the commission were up for grabs.

Incumbents Regina

Smithson, Paul Webb and Joe Reagan won the remaining seats. Webb and Smithson tied with 1,979 votes. Reagan finished in fourth place with 1,929 votes.

More details about the race and the winners will be in Thursday's edition of Williamson AM.

— HARRIET VAUGHAN
hvaughan@tennessean.com

RUTHERFORD COUNTY

Teacher quits over testing 'mistake'

A Rutherford County teacher has resigned after she made what she called an "honest mistake" during state testing.

Sherry Culbertson had taught at Central Middle School since August 2008 but was suspended without pay on Feb. 2.

The eighth-grade spe-

after it was distributed.

She gave the students extra time to take the test, said James Evans, county schools spokesman.

Evans said the students' tests were disqualified. State rules bar students from taking the test twice. "It doesn't affect them academically," he added.

East Nashville, says she has concerns about the park's design even before it opened in 2006. She said then that small dogs need a separate fenced area, such as at Centennial Park's dog area.

She also says dog owners need to take responsibility but that most owners are blind to socialization skills and the "packing order" in the dog world.

"It is a shame as some owners will bring their beloved 4-legged friend and keep them on leash due to the recent fights and fatalities," Brewer said.

ACTION: Metro's parks department enlisted some of its dog management team to listen to concerns about the Shelby Park dog area and talk about the city's dog parks, past and future. There are three: at Shelby Park, Centennial Park and Edwin Warner Park.

First, if folks want to discuss the Shelby Park area, they are urged to set up a meeting with the dog management team.

The team includes parks representatives, including its police force, and representatives of Metro's Animal Control Department, the Nashville Humane Association, the state veterinary association and